INTRODUCTION

The primary purpose of this guide is to describe in general terms the nature and scope of the manuscript and oral history collections acquired by our department from 1975 to 1978. In acquiring manuscript collections and oral history tapes our Archives is attempting to build a research collection that can be used by the Winthrop faculty and students and other scholars to investigate and write about South Carolina history. By preserving valuable documentation relating to people, families and organizations in the state.we hope to contribute to the rich heritage that is South Carolina's.

No archives can possibly assume the task of the preservation of the history of our entire state; therefore, the character of our collection has been dictated by both the past history of Winthrop College and its location. Since Winthrop was primarily a women's college until 1974 when it became coeducational, we believe that this has afforded us the opportunity to help document the role that women have played in the shaping of our state's history. Many of our graduates have gone on to perform active and important roles as leaders and participants in clubs and organizations, home extension, social work, politics, civic and charitable affairs, and other activities. The letters, diaries, speeches, clippings, photographs, and other types of material that they have accumulated through the years would be of interest and importance for those wishing documentation on what role women have had in the shaping of South Carolina history. A quick perusal of the index will show that the entry "for women" contains numerous references for the study of women's history.

Winthrop is located in the Upper Piedmont region of South Carolina, which, for our purposes, encompasses York, Lancaster, Chester and Union Counties. Much history exists in the region and much has vanished. While historical societies do exist in the region, none have been actively and aggressively seeking and acquiring the records of clubs, organizations and businesses and the papers of people and families. Our Archives is attempting to improve upon the situation by collecting, preserving and making available for research and study to Winthrop faculty and students, scholars from other institutions, genealogists, local historians, journalists and others, a valuable and growing collection of documents relating to the history of the Upper Piedmont. In this early stage of our collecting program our Archives has focused on York County, but with time we hope to gather more material relating to Chester, Lancaster and Union Counties.

The Winthrop College Archives and Special Collections is also the repository for records relating to the growth and development of the College which was founded in 1886 in Columbia, South Carolina. In the Archives are the minutes of the Board of Trustees; the administrative records of the presidents; records relating to the history of various administrative offices and academic departments; college, faculty and student publications; records relating to the history of student clubs and organizations; and other records of administrative and historic value.

These records offer a rich resource to the scholar and student wishing to study the history of higher education, particularly the education of women.

As of December, 1977, the holdings of our department which relate specifically to the history of Winthrop total approximately 320 linear feet of boxed records and over 900 bound volumes. During the coming year the Archives plans to issue a guide to this collection of records.

The Archives also houses a small but growing book collection. In this collection can be found first editions of significance, books printed in South Carolina before 1900, limited editions, books printed before 1600, books printed in the United States before 1820, and other books too valuable to be placed in the Dacus Library's general collection.

Gratitude is expressed to Miss Shirley Tarlton, the College Librarian, for her enduring interest, encouragement and support of the Winthrop Archives and Special Collections; to Dr. Arnold Shankman and Miss Louise Pettus of the Winthrop faculty whose interest in and contributions to our program made the compilation of the guide seem worthwhile; to Anne Yarborough, graduate assistant, and others of the Archives staff whose diligence allowed the Archivist the time to complete the guide; to Dr. Constance Ashton Myers who gave or allowed us to copy many of the oral history tapes comprising the oral history collection; to Ann Rodgers and Maryanne Jones for typing the guide; and to Carole McIver of the Dacus Library's Technical Services division for proofreading the index.

HOW TO USE THIS GUIDE

The collections housed in the Winthrop Archives and Special Collections are listed in this guide in two sections entitled, manuscript collection and oral history collection. The entries in each section are arranged alphabetically by collection title with each entry numbered consecutively.

The description for each entry in the section for the manuscript collection include the name of the collection; the birth and death dates (if ascertainable); the inclusive dates of the material contained in the collection; an indication if the collection contains copies of original documents; the occupation of the individual or activity of the organization or company; and a brief description of the contents of the collection, including types of material and important subjects and correspondents.

Those collections not processed at the time of the writing of this guide bear an asterisk (*). Otherwise, each collection has an inventory or accession record describing each collection in greater detail.

Each collection is measured in pieces or in linear feet, with the bound volumes counted separately. A piece is a single sheet of paper, while a linear foot is measured as a hypothetical stack of papers. Since the Archives staff does not have the time to count the number of pieces for each item, we believe that a straight piece count for collections of less than one hollinger box provides a greater degree of accuracy. A hollinger box contains one-fourth of a linear foot of material. So, if a collection is listed as containing one foot of material, then it contains four hollinger boxes of material.

The description for each entry in the section for the oral history collection includes the name of the interviewee, the year of the interview, the number of hours of tapes, the number of pages of transcription (if the interview has been transcribed), the occupation or activity of the interviewee, and a brief description of the important subjects discussed in the interview. Most of the interviews have not been transcribed, but we hope that additional funding in the future will allow for the transcription of most of our oral history interviews.

Abbreviations used in the descriptive entries for both the manuscript and oral history sections include "b" for birth date, "bd. v." for bound volume, "ca." for approximately, "d" for death date, "ft." for foot, and "n.d." for no date.

The oral history collection section is followed by an alphabetical index which includes the names of the collections and the subjects and names of people mentioned in the descriptive entries.

At the end of the guide is an alphabetical list of the generous people who have either given the Archives material or who have aided our efforts to acquire manuscript and oral history material.
